

Special Election Issue

This special issue has been commissioned because we are in an election year, and there are some articles I feel I must send out to you all. Whatever your political alignment, please read these honestly. I'm not saying you should get rid of your preconceptions – I'm planning on hacking through them.

Change

Barack the Savior: The real Obama-nation of this campaign

Obama's real religion: It ain't Christian

Change

My friends, change is changing the change this year. This year, which is a year of change, is the year for this changing change to make change. Everything must change. Religion must change. Backgrounds must change. History must change. Truth must change, as well as a change to how we know it. I promise so much change that, should I be elected, I promise I will change, and I will change what I have promised. Did I mention the change that is ahead of us? And if we don't change now, the change in our pocket may change in value, even if you exchange it for non-change monetary notes. Oh friends, that change, even if changed, will not protect you from the upcoming change. Our only chance to save our change is to change our direction before the change, so when the change comes we will have already changed, and the change will not change any part of our already changed selves. Change!

Barack the Savior

Barack Obama is being worshipped. He is called the savior by Louis Farrakhan. His name has been praised by many people. One famous singer sung his name (Ba-ah-rak O-ba-ah-ma-ah! Ba-ah-rak O-ba-ah-ma-ah!). Young men at one school stated what Barack Obama had inspired them to do while chanting "Alpha and Omega". What! The Rolling Stones cover showed Barack Obama as the savior with white righteousness glowing around him, seeming to effervesce from his body. "Obama is my Messiah" declared one bumper sticker.

No. Barack Obama is no savior. In fact, this very matter shows that he is not a Christian either, for a true Christian would condemn such worship. Better to lose a campaign and gain riches in heaven than to lose your head and gain suffering in hell. Better to condemn men than to be condemned by God. And any person who says otherwise is not saved himself, be sure of that. As the old saying goes, "Let God be true, and every man a liar." How dare that man claim to be God! Friends, we cannot allow such a blasphemer to become president. A vote for Barack Obama is a vote for Babel, a vote for Babylon as our future, and the White House will be his Tower. Any who would follow him obviously doesn't follow Him. Do they not know the verse, "if any man tells you the savior is here or there, do not believe him" (Matthew 24:23). Maybe that was just 'one of those verse' Obama doesn't read in his Bible, like all those verses that condemn homosexuality (Romans 1:26-27, 1 Corinthians 6:9-11, Jude 7, Revelation 21:8, and many others). (see http://www.bible.org/page.php?page_id=1302 for more.)

Obama's Real Religion: It's Ain't Christian

I have known for a long time that Barack is no Christian. It is obvious, going only on the information above that he is not, or he would rebuke those praising him instead of God. I thought maybe muslim, then maybe atheist, but nothing I thought of fit right. Christianity especially didn't fit. Then Todd Friel, on The Way of the Master Radio show, said what I was waiting for - Barack Obama is a universalist! Once he said it, I thought about it, and sure enough, it fits. Perfectly.

Universalists say that everyone will get into heaven.

A Christian says only those who turn from their sins and trust in Jesus Christ completely and alone will get into heaven.

Barack Obama says Christ may be the way for him, but not necessarily the way for others.

Jesus said "I am the way, the truth, and the life: no man come to the father except through me (John 14:6).

What Jesus said is what Christians believe. It is directly opposed to universalism, which says there are many ways. Now, which one does Barack's statement sound like?

I actually wrote a song that I think elaborates on this very well:

*Obama's real religion
Well, it ain't Christian
He's a universalist – what's that mean?
Well, the religions really lean
No laws, no beliefs, no one's really wrong
That's the point of this entire song
What happened to the terrorists from 9/11?
Universalists believe they went to heaven!
You see, they think that all is well
Because they don't believe in Hell
Universalism is not right
That's a heresy that we must fight
Because they claim to be Christian
When Christ is the thing they're really missin'
And that's Barack Hussein Obama's real religion!*

Finally, a song about Obama that can't be classified as praise and worship!

And there are more. The Bible says children are a blessing (Psalm 127:3). Barack Obama says they are punishment. The Bible says we were created. Barack Obama thinks he came from a monkey. Well, if he wants to be descended from a monkey, let him. But since things reproduce after their kind (like God said that they would TEN TIMES in Genesis), doesn't that make Obama a monkey? And what right does a monkey have running for office? He's not like his father at all – does that mean he isn't a chimp off the old block? Ha ha ha. He brought it on himself. Anyone who believes we came from monkeys should be treated as such. And as a politician, the connection is there. I mean, monkeys fling excrement at each other when they are angry, and isn't that basically what politicians do?

Friends, in November, I won't be in that voting booth with you (but I will be voting for the first time this year. YEAH!) but God will be. Your privacy can't hide your vote from Him. I'm voting to make history – it'll be the first time that a major news network lost an election (MSNBC – Multicast Support Nationwide for Barack Channel). Oh, yeah, and that whole first female vice president thing. But more voting against MSNBC and the false messiah Barack Obama than anything else.